Q: Hide and show elements when they "fill" the space without having to type all the way up to the top I am currently using this code to hide/show divs. However, when I resize my window, it always "jumps" up to the top. How can I get it to not have to "jump" when it is resized? I have a menu, and when you resize the window, I want that menu to "fill" the space when it resizes, instead of "jumping" to the top. Is this possible? I've tried using min-width and min-height as well, but it won't work. $(document).ready(function() { $(".div").click(function() { $(".div").hide(); $(this).show(); return false; }); }); A: the simple fix will be to add: .menu-view.div { position: fixed; } to your css, if you want to make it work for any screen, you may want to consider using media queries. To optimize for Mobile Only $(document).ready(function() { $(".div").click(function() { $(".div").hide(); $(this).show(); return false; }); }); .menu-view { overflow: hidden; border-bottom: 1px solid #ccc; } .menu-view.div { position: fixed; } .menu-view.mobile

Down syndrome (DS) is the most common genetic cause of severe ID, and heterozygous trisomy 21 is the only known naturally occurring human model of cognitive impairment. OBJECTIVE. The current study examined the role of the human homologue of the nematode motor neuron degeneration gene 1 (MND1) in DS. RESULTS. We demonstrate that mammalian homologs of MND1/HEH are localized to the nuclear and cytoplasmic compartments and regulate RNA splicing and trafficking in the nuclei of human retinal pigment epithelial cells. We identify a human developmental disorder, characterized by deceleration of head growth and intellectual and motor decline, with a large deletion that disrupts the human MND1 homologs. These disorders are a mosaic of developmental and behavioral features similar to DS. These results
